Sometimes in life there are certain things that you just shouldn't have to say...everyone should already know them. Unwritten rules if you will. Things like don't talk or chew with your mouth open. Or, let people off the elevator before trying to get on yourself. Or, use your manners and say please and thank you. Whether they should go without saying or not, sometimes people have a hard time following them. There's another pretty big example of what you would think to be an unwritten rule from the Bible, but not only was it written, but Jesus commanded His followers and reminded them they should follow it.

Jesus says in John 15:12-13- "My command is this: Love each other as I have loved you. Greater love has no one than this: to lay down one's life for one's friends." Jesus remind His followers that we should love each other. And not love the way the world today says it, but we ought to love as He loves—sacrificially. That's a difficult command, but we should all aspire to it.
