I don't know about you, but I like being a part of a community that cares about each other. It seems nowadays that there are more and more things that divide us than what brings us together. While it's important to be self-sufficient and responsible, we all need each other more than we realize. A healthy community where neighbors know and can count on one another is crucial to experiencing a certain level of peace. But as I said before, it's easy to focus on what makes us different and isolate ourselves from others.

This is true even of Christians. Paul says in Romans 12:5- "so in Christ we, though many, form one body, and each member belongs to all the others." If you're a part of God's family, you are not alone. You're a part of something bigger than yourself. You are connected to an amazing spiritual community. And when you are, you are not your own. That means you share a responsibility to be a blessing to others as well as the great gift of being blessed by others as well. Do you have a faith community?

I know one you ought to check out
